

Conrad O'Brien has a broad national litigation practice, representing both large and small companies in a myriad of legal matters. We represent businesses, insurance companies and financial institutions in breach of contract and other disputes; manufacturers in antitrust actions; entertainment companies in defamation litigation; commodities manufacturers in supply-chain disputes; professional corporations, partnerships, and limited liability entities in lawsuits among stakeholders; intellectual property owners in trademark, copyright, and restrictive covenant litigation; and medical and legal professionals in malpractice cases. We recently won jury defense verdicts in two legal malpractice actions in which the firm represented prominent Philadelphia-based law firms. In another instance, we represented a multinational corporation in an environmental insurance recovery case and secured more than $300 million for our client. We also represent former directors and officers of financing companies in subprime related lawsuits filed years before the credit crisis broke in 2007. Wherever business is done and conflicts arise, Conrad O'Brien is there to facilitate the best possible resolution.
