Biography

Robert Rauker is one of the leading patent attorneys in the Delaware Valley. Prior to joining Conrad O'Brien, for over a decade, Bob served as either Chief of Senior Patent Counsel to two major multi-billion dollar medical device and scientific companies. Before going in-house, Bob was an associate specializing in IP litigation with a major Midwestern law firm. From 2004–2008, Bob was Vice President, Global Chief Patent Counsel for Synthes, Inc., a leading $3 billion dollar global medical device company, headquartered in West Chester, Pennsylvania. While at Synthes, he successfully managed multiple patent infringement suits around the world and created the company's first-ever global intellectual property department, whose purpose was to improve the current and future value of the company's intellectual property, while also implementing cost-containment measures. Today, Bob provides clients with sophisticated assistance in the areas of patent infringement litigation and trade secret protection, while also counseling clients on a strategic patenting initiatives, IP opinions, due diligence and patent portfolio evaluations. In addition, he has significant experience in negotiating and licenses, acquisition, development, and consulting arrangements. Bob's 15 years of experience in the medical device industry provides him with a unique ability to evaluate and counsel clients on the impact of FDA rules and regulations regarding the acquisition, licensing and development of intellectual property.
